The Week in Society.

The Doings of the Smart Set the Past Six Days. Pleasant Events and Personal Mention.

CUPID'S GARDEN.

When the world as yet was young, Cupid made a garden. Where no clouds their shadows hung, Where no frosts could hurtle. There the roses never died, Nor the lilies faded, Nor the paths of either side Were by myrtles shaded.

Now the world is growing old; Likewise stale and staid, Caring more for gold and gold Than for Master Cupid. Yet he often throws his place, That in summer weather, Common people for a space May walk through together.
—Ethan Thayercroft Fowler.

DOLE FAIR NIENTE.

Society presents some curious phases, for a time here when the mercury was rising higher and higher, and threatening an indefinite expansion, Society was going at a rate sufficient to superinduce nervous prostration; hot now, she has stopped and seems to have no inclination to resume the social functions, although the dials and lights are pleasantly cool. This week has been dole far niente, even the usual outdoor pleasures—parades have failed in materialize. The Cotillion club dance called in for last week was not revived for this and at present Society is just enjoying being care-free, and playing "come to see." The girls go down the street in the morning and pay a visit to the soda water fountain. Then in wrappers and with books they rest until late in the evening when a stroll out Broadway is indulged. And how sweet they look in their dainty gowns of pale blue and pink with the fetching rosette in the hair! As a young society man said recently, "I declare, to pass to the shop windows full of pretty summer goods makes me wish to be a girl." What must be his feeling then when he sees how bewitching these same goods look adorning the alluring summer girl? He is too busy, perhaps, admiring her, to pay any attention to the dress. The evening stroll generally winds up with a trolley ride to the park and attendance upon the summer theater. This is all thoroughly informal, just a jolly crowd, sometimes with only one or two men to a half dozen or more girls. And this represents the social round of the past week; there is nothing in any way resembling a function to report.

Mrs. Richard Baker opens this coming week with an entertainment. And it is probable that the gayeties will not be allowed to cease so entirely again, as there are others announced, or rumored.

THE ORIGINALS

OF COL. CARVEL AND VIRGINIA CARVEL.
It may interest many Paducah people to know that over in St. Louis the prototype of "Colonel Carvel" in Winston Churchill's "Crisis" is said to be the late Colonel Robert Woods, an old-time Southern gentleman, and the father of Mrs. Given Campbell of that city, who is well and charmingly known here. And Mrs. Campbell herself is said to be the original of the fascinating and lovable Virginia Carvel. During the war, Mrs. Campbell, then the brilliant and popular Miss Rae Betty Woods occupied very much the same position in St. Louis society, in her devotion and love for the South, her hatred of the North, that Virginia Carvel did. The love story was not the same, though, for Mrs. Campbell was a dashing young southern soldier and not a northern man when she married him.

PARK DANCE.

There was quite a pleasant dance given at La Belle park pavilion on Thursday evening by the Jackson street club. The evening being delightfully cool, the attendance was quite large, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

PARTY ON THE BROOK

HILL THIS EVENING.

There will be a pleasant party on the Brook Hill this evening that will give delight and interest to the younger society set. Miss Rosebud Hobson and Miss Lillie Hobson are the charming hostesses, and Mr. Garrard Barrett and Mr. William Garrard, of Greenwood, Miss., are the guests of honor. Quite a number have been invited and it is safe to prophesy a delightful evening for the happy party.

A MORNING CARD PARTY.

Miss Mary K. Howell entertained a few friends with an impromptu card party in a most delightful and unusual manner this morning in honor of her guest, Miss Wade, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. The entertainment was given on board the steamer Bettie Owen, and a delightful breakfast was served at the Lynn House at Brookport. Mrs. Minnie Rankin and Miss Laura Rankin won the prize. Mrs. Rankin won in the end and presented it to the guest of honor, Miss Wade. Those present were: Mrs. E. L. Sanders, Mrs. Minnie Rankin, Mrs. Wynne Tully, Miss Wade, of Murfreesboro, Miss Laura Rankin, Miss Soile Thompson, Miss Mabel Rieke, Miss Cornie Grundy and Miss Jane Rivers.
